A highly sought-after rural retreat, Les Fermes de Marie is one of the best hotels in Megève

With Emily in Paris spending Christmas in an opulent Megève chalet and excitement mounting over the possibility of a White Lotus film crew checking into the resort's ultra-luxurious Four Seasons this season, monied Megève has never been so sought-after. Its blue-blooded pedigree harks back to the 1920s and luxury accommodation is its calling card.

A flush of five-star hotels panders to an exceedingly wealthy clientele with traditional chalet interiors, Michelin-starred dining, top-drawer spa facilities and private shuttles (four-wheel drive or horse-drawn sleigh) to the resort's scattered ski lifts. Among extraordinary private chalets, seven-bedroom Le Sarto – a priceless Art Deco address, designed in 1941 by famous French architect Henry-Jacques Le Même – is the new luxury chalet to rent this season with Iconic House (from €24,500/£21,300 per week).

Less-flush mortals can enjoy a modest handful of mid-range hotels, linked by free ski bus to/from the Rochebrune, Mont d'Arbois and Le Jaillet ski areas. Ski-in/ski-out self-catering chalets and apartments, located within walking distance of the centre, make the most sense for beginners who stick to gentle blues winding down to the village and advanced skiers chasing challenging terrain in Mont Joly and Côte 2000.

All our recommendations below have been hand selected by our ski expert to help you discover the best accommodation in Megève. Find out more below, or for more Megève inspiration, see our guides to the resort's best restaurants and après ski.

The best hotels and chalets in Megève

Realis & Châteaux Flocons de Sel

Discerning gastronomes can't get enough of the flagship of French chef Emmanuel Renault, a quintessential chalet set amid snow-dusted pine trees, up a quiet lane past the Rochebrune cable car. After being shut for refurbishment, the boutique hotel reopens in December 2025. 10 contemporary but classical doubles and suites typically mix pale wood with tweedy fabrics in natural hues, framed photographic prints of snow-encrusted mountain peaks and plenty of natural light; some suites have their own wood burner. The hotel's gastronomic restaurant is the only triple Michelin-starred address (since 2012) in the Alps alongside Courchevel's Cheval Blanc.

Relais & Châteaux Flocons de Sel (0033 4 50 21 49 99; emmanuelrenaut.com) has doubles rooms from €580 (£500) per night excluding breakfast.

Les Fermes de Marie

Peace and privacy is guaranteed at this rural retreat, a highly sought-after address long before Emily rocked up from Paris to stay in Episode 6, Season 4 of the Netflix series. Part of the luxurious Maisons & Hôtels Sibuet group, rooms at the five-star hotel are split between the main farmhouse and a scattering of wooden chalets and mazots (pint-sized pastoral chalets) in the grounds. Breakfast is cooked by chefs in white toques, Savoyard cheese and black truffles are star turns in the restaurant and treatments in the Pure Altitude spa celebrate the Alps' botanical wonders. Emily stayed in the hotel's five-bedroom Chalet des Fermes de Marie, one of several chalets spread around the resort, with service provided by the five-star hotel.

Les Fermes de Marie (0033 4 50 93 03 10; fermesdemarie.com) has double rooms from €590 (£510) including breakfast.

Four Seasons Hotel Megève

Dripping in unadulterated luxury and jet-set cache, White Lotus fans won't be disappointed should HBO show writers decide to break the mould and opt for an uncharacteristic snow-dusted location. Right on the slopes near the foot of Mont d'Arbois, this is Megève's only ski-in/ski-out hotel. A ski valet warms guests' boots, and the ski concierge prepares itineraries and lays out equipment, allowing guests to simply click in and ski. Most of the 55 modern rooms and suites sport a fireplace or balcony, and younger guests are entertained with a Kids' Club, Teen Zone and cinema. Restaurants include gastronomic, cheesy Savoyard and Japanese fusion. A night in the Four Season's only solitary high-altitude suite at 1,850m, only accessible by cable car, is a luxurious highlight.

Hôtel Les Cimes

A two-star hotel is a rarity in a ski resort so exclusive and gold-gilded as Megève. Enter good-value Les Cimes, a traditional auberge with eight button-cute rooms styled like a Savoyard chalet and two self-catering studios, sleeping up to four. British owners Michelle and Adam actually ran Les Cimes as a luxury catered chalet for 20 years (until the pandemic), hence the afternoon tea still served in its breakfast room, TV lounge and post-ski chill-out zone. The British red telephone box in the front garden that holds sentry (and turns the head of every passer-by) was a birthday gift from Adam to Michelle.

Hôtel Les Cimes (00 33 4 50 21 11 13; hotellescimes.com) has double rooms from €200 (£175), B&B, including afternoon tea.

Hotel Saint-Georges

Under the new ownership of French boutique-hotel collection Chapitre Six (known for transforming properties like St Tropez's La Ponche and Paris' La Folie Barbizon), Megève's much-loved Chalet St Georges of yesteryear becomes sassy Hôtel Saint-Georges this season (2025/26). Top-to-toe renovation has added new zing to the refreshed interiors, which remain enchanting and deliciously quirky. The mix of Toile de Jouy fabrics by Pierre Frey, wallpapers and hand-painted frescoes featuring retro snow scenes and storybook pine forests by London's Christophe Moore are simply gorgeous. Deluxe mezzanine rooms, sleeping four, are great for families, and village views from the suite are unmatched. The hotel has a piano bar and restaurant, spa with sauna and hot tub, fitness room and kids' club.

Hôtel Saint-Georges (0033 4 50 93 07 15; hotelsaintgeorges-megeve.com) has double rooms from €450 (£390) excluding breakfast.
