Peak Retreats sees increased demand for French Alps holidays by train

BY SKIER & SNOWBOARDER on 11TH JUNE 2026 · (0)

Growing interest in alternatives to flying is fuelling demand for holidays by train this summer, says award-winning French Alps specialist, Peak Retreats. The company's summer holidays are on sale now and include travel to a choice of resorts and accommodation that are all easily reachable by rail.

Travelling by train provides a relaxed and convenient alternative to flying. Clients can enjoy a comfortable journey with generous luggage allowances and scenic views along the way, as well as simple onward transfers to their chosen resort.

At a time when some travellers are looking for alternatives to air travel due to ongoing pressures and disruption within the aviation sector, rail offers a reliable and straightforward way to reach the French Alps.

Peak Retreats offers the option to package rail travel with accommodation and transfers, making it easy for clients to arrange their full holiday in one booking. The company offers a wide choice of self-catered accommodation in both popular and lesser-known resorts across the French Alps, ideal for summer mountain stays.

Alison Willis, Managing Director of Peak Retreats, says: "With so much talk in the media about jet fuel, we are seeing people being more open to alternatives to flying as they still want to get away this summer. We've always been passionate about train travel to the Alps. Our team are converts and having done the journey ourselves with our own families, we can offer detailed advice and tips to those looking to try the train for the first time."

Travelling by train can be particularly appealing to families and those looking to avoid the stress often associated with airports. It is also a more environmentally friendly way to reach the mountains, an increasingly important consideration for many travellers.
